How these tie into each other:
You start in the tutorial region, you complete the mini dungeon and move on to the desert, you venture through the desert and find the mini dungeon which is a mini pyramid and the mini boss is a sphynx like entity, after some more exploring you find out the main dungeon has been buried under all the sand than you enter the main boss fight of that region which is a giant desert sand snake that's been roaming around in the sand, after you defeat it you move on to the mountains region, this will be a shorter region as its more linear and has less room for exploration, after you scale the mountain you reach the frozen peaks, roaming around are frost enemies who are extremely hostile, but brittle, you find the mini dungeon and the boss is an ice golem, not the same size as the player but not so much bigger, after you defeat it you move on throughout the peaks and discover that at the very top is a frost giant, the last of its kind, once you defeat it you find a portal that transfers you to the final region, The [Insert final boss here]'s castle, this entire region will also double as the dungeon as you explore throught the rooms of the hellish castle you find, some rooms that correspond to the different dungeons and landscapes you've already been through and conquered. In each of the dungeons will be a new unique enemy pertaining to the theme of the room. And after you find all 4 special rooms and defeat each special enemy, the main door opens and you enter the final boss fight.
